LUTHERAN CHURCH TO LAUNCH DRIVE FOR $500,000 FUND

The local opening of a nation-wide Lutheran campaign for $500,000 for reconstruction work, will be made tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock. In St. Peter's Lutheran church, South Jackson street.

Chaplain H. E. Snyder, Camp Grant was the speaker. Chaplain Snyder was formerly pastor of Luther Memorial church, Madison. Before his commissioning as a chaplain he was stationed at Great Lakes Training station as camp pastor in connection with the large Lutheran Brotherhood building at that place.

Chaplain Snyder will tell the purpose of the present campaign for $500,000 as well as tell of the work accomplished with the fund of $1,250,000 raised in February 1918 for soldiers and sailors welfare.

BEVIES OF TEACHERS AT TRAINING SCHOOL

Bevies of alert enthusiastic young school teachers from the country districts were in attendance this morning at the rural teachers institute school, to confer on problems connected with their work, and to formulate plans for increased usefulness in the future. Hints on teaching and suggestion along the lines of present work were given and several talks on practical subjects gave inspiration to the future.

The state inspector of graded schools, W. T. Anderson, was present. He gave a talk on "Mistakes Made by Teachers and What to Do About Them." He emphasized the idea that lack of preparation on the part of both pupil and teacher was chiefly responsible for many things which were regarded as failures. He said that there were some subjects like reading, writing, arithmetic and spelling which any one could teach. But there were others, such as history, literature, sociology, geography and science which required continual development to keep in touch with the times.

Advices Added Education
He advised added education at special schools to broaden the outlook, and enable a teacher to keep up with the times. But he also noted that some graduates of universities do not make good on their job. This he attributed in a great measure, to laziness, and unwillingness to work. In regard to the lack of preparation of pupils he said that definite lessons were not assigned, or that pupils had no knowledge of how to study the lesson. He said that there should be a perfect relation between the pupil and teacher, and they should talk over their work together.

Much trouble he thought was due to poor management during the recitation. All material to be used should be ready, and the subject should be attempted in a business-like way. He said that a teacher should allow no side stepping or bluffing on the part of the pupil. He should give extra encouragement and help to the backward pupil.

He deplored a shiftless mental habit in the pupils and said that they should be taught to see the subject in a complete way, and be able to give a summary of it before closing. His talk was rational and helpful and was presented with clearness and brevity.

Warm Lunches Discussed

The forenoon session was opened by a period of singing by all, led by Marie Dobson and a chorus of ten girls. Afterward a symposium on the subject of warm lunches in the rural schools was discussed by four teachers, each of them giving their experiences in a five minute talk. Those who spoke were Bertha Thorsen, Beth Sullivan, Martha Anderson, and Janet McAdams. All agreed that great benefits accrued to both pupils and parents through this means. Better health for the pupils, acquisition of elementary ideas of food value, and of cooking, better table manners, and eating their food properly and comfortably were the thoughts brought out. Cooperation between the home and the school and more interest aroused among the mothers by this plan was also mentioned.

Details of equipment and menu were discussed in a general discussion closed the topic.

Miss Clapp Speaks

The morning session was closed by a general talk given by Miss Sadie Clapp on the problems coming up in the office of the county superintendent in regard to details of work. She said that many teachers think that the blanks sent to them for information, are of no value, and neglect to fill them out, occasioning a great deal of trouble for the officials to get results. She went into details concerning some of the work which needed attention at this time. She reported that 110 schools had taken up the Junior Red Cross work, leaving about 40 who had as yet made no report on the subject. She said that $550 had been sent in to the office from dues taken in for the juniors. Directions for enrollment and for getting material for hand work were also given. She gave information concerning contributions for the French orphans.

She also emphasized the idea that the children were asked to gather war records of soldiers and sailors, and such other data as will be of use in tabulating the record of the county in war work.

Antislavery Talks This Afternoon

This afternoon a talk by Supt. Antislavery was one of the features, with helpful suggestions along the line of work. Miss Ella Jacobson also gave a talk on "Tests and Measurements." Two of the supervising teachers, Jennie Dean and Harriet Bill, gave a few minutes to talk on problems which they had met in field work. Marie Dobson gave some suggestions on "How to Conduct the School Society Successfully."

An oral lesson conducted by Mae Devine with a class of second grade pupils closed the afternoon, followed by a general discussion by all. There was a very large attendance, the capacity of the room at the school being taxed, and interest and enthusiasm was everywhere manifest among the teachers present.

LOOKING AROUND

While the Cardinals are going along winning the majority of their games the fans should not overlook the high school team. The youths have only lost one game this year.

Chicago detectives have been engaged by the employees of the Spaulding Barber shop on North Academy street to investigate the looting of the coat box. "Hefnie Ryan is somewhat peeved concerning the robbery and claims that he will locate the culprit.

Norman Carle, Jr., now claims that he never asserted that Nap A. Ryan was an expert authority on automobiles. Norman Jr., is emphatic in his denial.

A galaxy of baseball stars was uncovered by the management of the Cardinals yesterday afternoon while the game between Ryan's All Stars and Hoffman's Nationals was in progress. "Hefnie Ryan is somewhat peeved concerning the robbery and claims that he will locate the culprit.

Local motorists and motorcycleists are exceedingly happy over the building program endorsed by both the council and the county. In the meantime the policemen are wondering who will be assigned to the motorcycle job.

REGAL HAT COMPANY MAY LOCATE IN CITY

City Clerk Victor Hemming this morning received a letter from the Regal Hat company of Chicago stating that the concern was contemplating moving the factory to Janesville and asked for some data on the conditions of the city.

The Regal Hat company is one of the largest makers of caps in the United States and have two factories in Chicago and three in New York. They make caps for men and boys and employ a large number of young ladies.

Owing to labor impositions, the company desires, according to the letter, to locate their factories in Janesville. They have made a survey of the city regarding factory sites and labor conditions and assert that they are well satisfied with conditions.

With a weekly payroll of several thousand dollars, the company asks no bonuses and merely desires information before completing plans. Working conditions for the company desiring to leave Chicago and the main question asked by the factory is whether girls can be secured in the city for their factories.

Established in 1881 the Regal Hat company has made wonderful progress. City Clerk Hemming referred the communication to Frank J. Green, manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

His Love Story

By
MARIE VAN VORST

"This dog," at mention of his name, set Brunet's leg free and stood quiet, his head lifted.

"Nor you either, mon brave Brunet," Sabron put his hand on his servant's shoulder, the first familiar touch he had ever shown a man who served him with devotion, and who would have given his life to save his master's. "Those," said the officer curtly, "are the orders from headquarters, and the least said about them the better."

The ruddy cheek of the servant turned pale. He mechanically touched his forehead.

"Blen, mon Capitaine," he murmured, with a little catch in his voice. He stood at attention, then wheeled and without being dismissed, stalked out of the room.

Pitchoune did not follow. He remained immovable like a little dog cut from bronze; he understood—who shall say—how much of the conversation? Sabron threw away his cigarette, then read his letter by the mantlepiece, leaning his arm upon it. He read slowly. He had broken the seal slowly. It was the first letter he had ever seen in this handwriting. It was written in French and ran, thus:

Monsieur—My aunt wishes me to ask you if you will come to us for a little musicale tomorrow afternoon. We hope you will be free, and I hope she added that you will bring Pitoune. Not that I think he will care for the music, but afterward perhaps he will run with us as we walk to the gate. My aunt wishes me to say that she has learned from the colonel that you have been ordered to Algiers. In this way she says that we shall have an opportunity of wishing you bon voyage, and I say I hope Pitchoune will be a comfort to you.

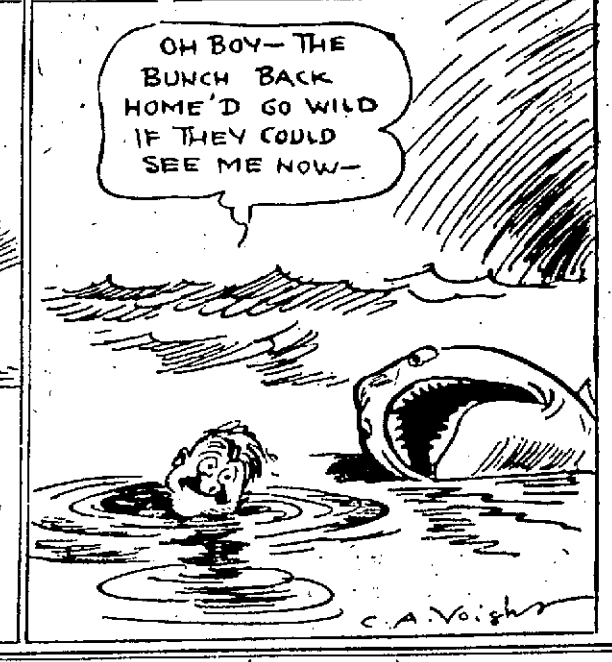

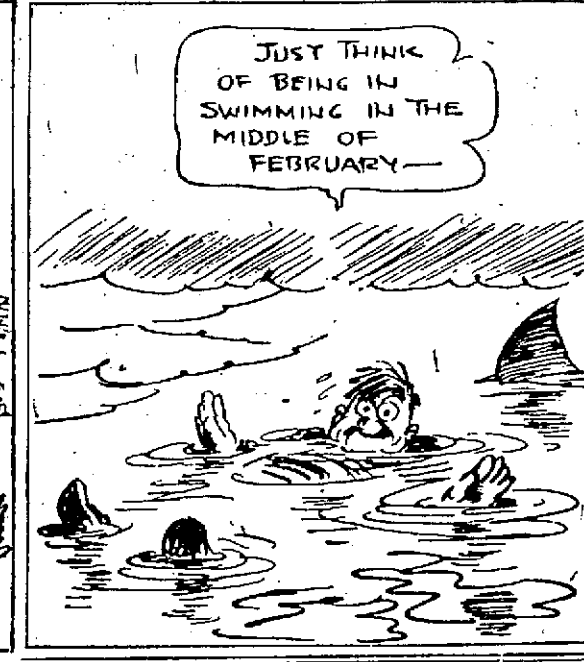

The letter ended in the usual formal French fashion. Sabron, turning the letter and rereading it, found that it completed the work that had been going on in his lonely heart. He stood long, musing.

Pitchoune laid himself down on the rug, his bright little head between his paws, his affectionate eyes on his master. The freighting shone on them both, the musing young officer and the almost human-hearted little beast. So Brunet found them when he came in with the lapp shortly, and as he set it down on the table and its light shone on him, Sabron, glancing at the ordonnance, saw that his eyes were red, and liked him none the less for it.

CHAPTER VII.

"A Soldier's Dog," he told Pitchoune. "I took you into my life, you little rascal, against my will, and now, although it's not your fault, you are making me regret it. I shall end, Pitchoune, by being a cynic and misogynist, and learn to make idols of my career and my troops alone. After all, they may be tiresome, but they don't hurt as you do, and some other things as well.

Pitchoune, being invited to the musicale at the Chateau d'Esclignac, went along with his master, running behind the captain's horse. It was a heavenly January day, soft and mild, full of sunlight and delicious odors, and over the towers of King Rene's castle the sky banners were made of celestial blue.

The officer found the house full of people. He thought it hard that he might not have had one more intimate picture to add to his collection. When he entered the room a young man was playing a violin. There was a group at the piano, and among the people the only ones he clearly saw were the hostess, Madame d'Esclignac in a gorgeous velvet frock, then Miss Redmond, who stood by the window, listening to the music. She saw him come in and smiled to him, and from that moment his eyes hardly left her.

What the music was that afternoon the Count de Sabron could not have told very intelligently. Much of it was sweet, all of it was touching, but when Miss Redmond stood to sing and chose the little song of which he had made a lullaby, and sang it divinely, Sabron, his hands clasped behind his back and his head a little bent, still looking at her, thought that his heart would break. It was horrible to go away and not talk her. It was cowardly to feel so much and not be able to speak it. And he felt that he might be equal to some wild deed, such as crossing the room violently, putting his hand over her slender one and saying:

"I am a soldier; I have nothing but a soldier's life. I am going to Africa tomorrow. Come with me; I want you, come!"

All of which, slightly impossible and quite out of the question, nevertheless charmed and soothed him. The words of her English song, almost barbaric to him because incomprehensible, fell on his ears. Its melody was already part of him.

"Monsieur de Sabron," said Madame d'Esclignac, "you are going away tomorrow?"

"Yes, Madame."

"I expect you will be engaged in some awful native skirmishes. Perhaps you will even be able to send back a tiger skin."

"There are no tigers in that part of Africa, Madame."

The young soldier's dark eyes rested almost hostilely on the gorgeous marquise in her red gown. He felt that she was glad to have him go. He wanted to say: "I shall come back, however; I shall come back and when I return..." but he knew that such a boast, or even such a hope was fruitless.

His colonel had told him only the day before that Miss Redmond was one of the richest American heiresses, and there was a question of a duke or a prince and heaven only knew what in the way of titles. As the marquise moved away her progress was something like the rolling of an elegant velvet chair, and while his feelings were still disturbed Miss Redmond crossed the room to him. Before Sabron quite knew how they had been able to escape the others or leave the room, he was standing with her in the winter garden where the sunlight came in through trellises and the perfume of the warmed plants was heavy and sweet. Before them flowed the Rhone, golden in the winter's light. The blue river swept its waves around old Tarascon and the battlements of King Rene's towers.

"You are going to Algiers tomorrow, Monsieur de Sabron?" Miss Redmond smiled, and how was Sabron to realize that she could not very well have wept there and then, had she wished to do so?

"Yes," he said. "I adore my regiment. I love my work. I have always wanted to see colonial service."

"Have you? It is delightful to find one's ambitions and desires satisfied," said Miss Redmond. "I have always longed to see the desert. It must be beautiful. Of course you are going to take Pitchoune?"

"Ah!" exclaimed Sabron, "that is just what I am not going to do."

"What?" she cried. "You are never going to leave that darling dog behind you?"

"I must, unfortunately. My superior officers do not allow me to take horses or dogs, or even my servant."

"Heavens!" she exclaimed. "What brutes they are! Why, Pitchoune will die of a broken heart." Then she said: "You are leaving him with your man servant?"

Sabron shook his head.

"Brunet would not be able to keep him."

"Ah!" she breathed. "He is looking for a home? Is he? If so, would you might I take care of Pitchoune?"

The Frenchman impulsively put out his hand, and she laid her own in it. "You are too good," he murmured. "Thank you. Pitchoune will thank you."

He kissed her hand. That was all. From within the salon came the noise of voices, and the bow of the violinist was beginning a new concerto. They stood looking at each other. No condition could have prevented it although the Marquise d'Esclignac was rolling toward them across the polished floor of the music room. As though Sabron realized that he might never see this lovely young woman again, probably never would see her, and wanted before he left to have something made clear, he asked quickly:

"Could you, Mademoiselle, in a word or two tell me the meaning of the English song you sang?"

She flushed and laughed slightly.

"Well, it is not very easy to put it in prose," she hesitated. "Things sound so differently in music and poetry; but it means," she said in French, bravely, "why, it is a sort of prayer that someone you love very much should be kept safe night and day. That's about all. There is a little sadness in it, as though," and her cheeks glowed, "as if there was a sort of separation. It means—"

"Ah!" breathed the officer deeply. "I understand. Thank you."

DINNER STORIES

"Poor man!" said the inquisitive old lady. "I expect you'll be glad when your time is up, won't you?"

"No, ma'am, not particularly," replied the prisoner. "I'm in for life."

"Smith is a great golf bug, isn't he?" said Brown.

"Yes," replied Jones. "He kept his hand in all winter and had practice every day."

"But how could he practice in winter when the links are closed?" asked Brown.

"We walked downtown every morning, and every two hundred yards, he would swing at an imaginary ball with his cane," replied Jones. "Then he would cuss a blue streak and when he got downtown he would drink a Scotch highball."

A noted humorous lecturer, who was invited to deliver an address to an audience of convicts in a western penitentiary, noticed that the audience laughed heartily, but did not applaud.

After the lecture the warden of the institution ventured an apology.

"They didn't seem very appreciative did they?" he asked.

"I thought they seemed to enjoy it very much," the lecturer replied.

"But they might have clapped a little," the warden remarked, "instead of just sitting there with their hands folded."

"Well, well!" the lecturer laughed. "I noticed that they sat, with their hands folded, but I thought they were all manacled."

RICHMOND

Richmond, Feb. 13.—The L. A. S. met with Mrs. Niskern on Wednesday and a Lincoln program was prepared for the occasion.

Mrs. Rosenbaum has returned home to Delavan.

Will Wudke was a recent Chicago visitor; and since returning home has the influenza.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Bowers and Mr. and Mrs. Tobey of Delavan, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Loomer of Millard, were Sunday visitors at the Borklund home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Harris were host and hostess to the Richmond Social Card Club on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Delaney spent Sunday evening at W. J. Ryan's in Lyman.

Mrs. Herman Reinke was called to Waukegan Monday, by the serious illness of her husband. Her school is closed again.

Mrs. Wiley Nott and children visited her parents in Madison, from Thursday to Sunday.

THE MEN IN CLASS A1

A sound, healthy man is never a back number. A man can be as vigorous and able at seventy as at twenty. Conditions, not years, put you in the discard. A system weakened by overwork and careless living brings old age prematurely. The bodily functions are impaired and unpleasant symptoms appear. The weak spot is generally the kidneys. Keep them clean and in proper working condition and you will generally find yourself in Class A. Take GOLD MEDAL HAZELTON OIL CAPSULES periodically and your system will always be in working order. Your spirits will be enlivened, your muscles supple, your mind active, and your body capable of hard work. Don't wait until you have been rejected. Commence to be a first-class man now. Go to your druggist at once. Get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL HAZELTON OIL CAPSULES. They are made of the pure, original, imported Hazelton Oil—the kind your great-grandfather used. Two capsules each day will keep you toned up and feeling fine. Money refunded if they do not help you. Remember to ask for the imported GOLD MEDAL Brand. In three sizes, sealed packages.

What Will Janesville Be In 1924?

Janesville, In 1924, Will Be Just What Janesville People Make It and No More

PEOPLE OF JANESVILLE: Remember this—that what Janesville will be in five years from now will DEPEND ON YOU—NOBODY ELSE BUT YOU. Get behind the Janesville Housing Corporation and Janesville will be a city of 50,000 in five years. The Janesville Housing Corporation was created:

- To provide substantial and attractive homes for the working people upon such terms as will enable them to live comfortably at moderate cost.
- To create a means by which established manufacturing concerns can be aided in increasing their force in that housing accommodations will be provided for such increase.
- To encourage and foster land and building improvements of such character that will cause rapid and substantial growth of the city.

To Provide These Houses We Must Have Funds—$100,000 More Is Needed

Janesville Banks have on deposit nearly $6,000,000 of your money. The money is here in the city. The need is imperative. Action must be secured. You are a booster and want to see the city and your business grow. Get behind this great civic movement and incidentally boom your own business. You mustn't expect to get results unless you, too, do your share.

Officers of the Samson Tractor and Janesville Machine Company plants, units of the General Motors Corporation have specifically stated that the growth of their institutions would not be allowed to progress beyond a point where their employees could be properly housed. If you hold back you will be retarding the growth of your city and your own business, for several years and allow the possibility of another city growing up outside of Janesville. This would not be pleasant.

The Janesville Housing Corporation is a civic institution purposing to do a great community service, the results of which will react profitably to every business concern in the city.

Next Wednesday, February 19th, Will Be "Housing Day" In Janesville

On that day YOU will be asked to subscribe. Give it your earnest attention now and SUBSCRIBE. Remember we must build houses and build them NOW and build them within the city limits or another city many times as large as Janesville will grow up outside and Janesville will be a suburb and not IT. You may turn in your vacant lot instead of cash to this housing plan and it will be accepted. Real estate is needed as well as cash.

Not so many years ago the cotton market was overstocked, and everybody was urged to buy a bale of cotton at five cents a pound to help the South out. Then the war came, and with the South in the saddle at Washington, cotton had its innings, with no restraint, and the people continue to pay the freight. But the world in which we live is intensely practical, and time is a great

"I was sick last winter for five months with stomach and bowel trouble. Could not turn myself in bed without pain. Druggists gave me a cathartic and they gave me up. Then Mr. Mills, the druggist, persuaded my husband to try a bottle of Miks Emulsion. After taking it for two days until I was sitting up in bed, and in two weeks I was doing me even well. I weighed 100 pounds, now I weigh 150 pounds."—Mrs. Mary Hendricks, 900 Litchfield Street, Chicago.

Thousands of people who have suffered for years from stomach and bowel trouble, have found relief in Miks Emulsion. Mrs. Hendricks did, almost from the first dose of Miks Emulsion. And it isn't mere temporary relief, but real and permanent cure.

Resume Of Moving Picture Programs—Of Last Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)

"Back to the School" has been the slogan displayed on the screen this past week, with the Industrial Labor board, the Child Welfare society, and the National Children's bureau back of the movement. The idea is to emphasize the thought that children are no longer needed in industry, and should be kept in school and given better training for the duties of life.

Wilson is still the center of interest abroad, and his reception in various cities at the peace conference has formed the themes for the picture news telegrams from over the seas, while transports bringing the soldiers, and flying in aeroplanes at the various training fields, are shown as bits of soldier life interesting to the folks at home.

A bustling story of rapid fire experiences was "Action" at the Beverly latter part of the week in "Hobbs in a Hurry," with William Russell as the hero. He was thrown off a train while trying to get to a western town in time to purchase a mine for his father, rode part of the way on top of the coach, was held up by bandits, and had a strenuous time of it generally. After some one else had bought the mine for a good price, it turned out that it was of no value anyway.

A really funny and unusual story was staged in "The Gold Cure," which was the Sunday attraction. Viola Dana was the village lassie who in despair that there were no eligible young men in the town, sought some of those who were supposed to be stranded there. An automobile accident brought one of them to grief and, badly hurt, he was brought into the home. When convalescent he was abducted and taken to a sanitarium for alcoholics, whence Viola follows to rescue him. Her absurd impersonation of a young man slightly under the influence of liquor and her adventures at the sanitarium are delightfully funny.

A western story, "The Light of Western Stars," was shown this week at this theater. Dustin Farnum represents the cowboy hero who from an irresponsible daredevil comes to have a serious aim in life.

At the Majestic the Sunday play was "The Captain's Captain," with Alice Joyce in the leading role. Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms" was the attraction at the Majestic the first part of the week. "Charlie" is at his best in this film, and his amusing stunts are done with such serious intentness that they can not fail to cause a hit. His attempts at drilling and his trench experiences are funny for a comic. Charlie Chaplin is funny for a comic. Charlie Chaplin is funny for a comic. Charlie Chaplin is funny for a comic.

The latter offering, "Find the Woman," had its scene laid in the picturesque French quarter of New Orleans. Alice Joyce was a girl, and her career was greatly ruined by the suspicion cast upon her that some jewels in her possession were bought from a trust fund held by an old friend of the family. The fund was later found as government property pasted on the wall in the innocent idea that they were valuables of no value.

"Hearts of the World" was shown at the Myer's the Sunday play, and was seen by large audiences. It was followed by the lively college play, "Brown of Harvard," in which the good-looking Tom Moore took the strenuous part of stroke out in the annual boat race. The atmosphere of college happenings was well carried out.

A later offering, "Blue Blood," was a powerful argument of degenerate aristocracy, and a plea that hereditary diseases be not allowed to taint future generations. It was well put on and the theme carried out with restraint and care.

At the Apollo, the first part of the week, Rita Jolivet was seen in "Last We Forget." It is a gripping picture of war, love, and intrigue, and takes in her adventures as an opera singer, captured by the Germans and her escape to her lover. The sinking of the Lusitania and the war scenes are realistically done.

A later attraction, "Blue Jeans," is a romantic story of love and sacrifice in the southland, in which Viola Dana as the girl wife was devoted to her husband and baby through great misadventures. The old woman who she found a home proved to be her grandparents.

In "The Honeymoon," Constance Talmadge as the young bride, jealous of her husband's attention to a girl, finds her husband's personality and pretty gowns are displayed to advantage, and the problems of getting a divorce and marrying again are worked out in a very amusing fashion.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Here is a romance that reads just like a scenario and of course it happened in the movies, they always do. Clairette Anthony, the well-known poster artist and magazine illustrator, and the latest "find" in motion pictures, recently became the wife of Capt. Howard Chesebrough Okio, of the Fourteenth Cavalry, U. S. A., now in France.

The wedding was the culmination of a studio romance which took place in the Famous Players-Lasky studio.

Miss Anthony was "found" by John Truex, who was induced to take one of the leading parts, opposite Ernest Truex. She consented, and during the making of this picture her ability attracted the attention of other directors, and she was cast to play with Elsie Ferguson in her next Artcraft picture, and also the leading part in a forthcoming Paramount-Flag comedy.

It was during the making of the final scenes of the production that Captain Okio was being shown through the Famous Players studio and was introduced to Miss Anthony. It was a case of "love at first sight." And inside of five days Captain Okio led his wife to the altar.

At the start of the war Captain Okio was a direct descendant of Concord, N. H., fitting himself off Yale. Leaving there he went to England and enlisted in King Edward's Horse, British Army, and served during 1914 and 1915 in France.

Returning to the United States, Private Okio attended the Plattsburg camp and became a twenty-one a captain in the regular army.

The bride is a direct descendant of Rubens, the artist, and the daughter of Jean Anthony, a well-known artist of Antwerp. She was forced to leave Belgium with her family at the beginning of the war, when the Germans took that country, and for a short while lived in England. In leaving her home she was given charge of a large number of the most valuable Rubens that are in existence, and after her short stay in London, came to New York City with the paintings, which have been kept in one of the large bank vaults here. She is an artist of note herself, and her works "East is West."

WHAT THEY ARE DOING

Elmer Clifton is getting along splendidly with his latest Dorothy Gish production temporarily called "Boots." The story concerns an English slaver, played by Dorothy, who had a fine opportunity to study this type when in England last summer making scenes for Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

Ann Forrest, the nineteen-year-old Danish girl who was associated with William Farnum in pictures, has left Los Angeles and films, and will be new serial which Ruth Roland is making at her studio at Glendale, Cal., for Pathé.

King Baggot has deserted the screen at least for a time to make a tour in vaudeville. The idea seems to be to secure a co-starring role for a woman picture favorite.

Marguerite Snow, who has been associated in pictures lately with Baggot, is undoubtedly the actress in view. Miss Snow is the wife of James Criss.

REEVE WRITES FOR SCREEN

Arthur B. Reeve, who wrote the famous Craig Kennedy detective stories, is co-author with Charles Logue of a new serial which Ruth Roland is making at her studio at Glendale, Cal., for Pathé.

Doughboys Complain of High Prices; French Hit Hard, Too

tion. Few of us realize that the country is in a very bad way industrially. If we will recall the spent and wasted condition of the southern states after our Civil war, we can grasp something of France's problem today. The enormous losses in men, in capital, agricultural enterprise, transportation, and manufacturing and mining equipment present staggering difficulties. The whole nation, engaged in winning the war, must now extricate itself from activities no longer required, and reorganize its peaceful industrial life all over again. The job is colossal.

Explains the French.

This brings us to a consideration of the commonly repeated charge that the French people are trying to gouge the doughboys. When a soldier has $33.14 a month to spend in a country where prices are two or three times as high as they once were, he is bound to accumulate a grudge. He wouldn't be quite human if he didn't. Let us investigate the situation.

The newspaper is said to have published recently a news item to the effect that certain barber shops charged two scales of prices, one for Americans and one for French. The newspaper ventured to ask whether American barbers were harder and wrier than the French variety. I have not encountered any two-price system anywhere in France, in barber shops or elsewhere. In all the stores I have visited, all articles were marked in plain figures, and the prices were the same for one customer as for another. Prices are high, to be sure, but it must be remembered that production and manufacture are pretty badly dislocated in France.

What Hotel Meals Cost.

At the large hotel where I have stayed while in Paris, a breakfast comprising an omelet, a pot of chocolate, marmalade and bread, costs about $1.15, including the luxury tax of 10 per cent. A good luncheon at the same place costs $2.25. A table d'hôte dinner, including four or five courses, costs $3. A simple dinner, ample for plain people, can be had for less. A traveler with appetite and appreciation for fine wines, can dine for as much more as he likes, but not too much attention should be paid to his reports of the excessive high cost of dining well.

The doughboy who goes into the battle of high prices with a slender roll should remember that the French people are having an easy time of it. The High Cost of Living has not overcooked them. I am indebted to Prof. Edouard Dolléans, attached to the French foreign office, for some figures that will enlighten Americans.

Where Living Is Expensive.

"Before the war," Prof. Dolléans told me, "butter was forty cents a pound in Paris. Now it is $2 a pound, and very scarce at that. Eggs, once thirty-five cents a dozen, are now $1.30 a dozen. A good man on his way home, before the war, and buy a steak for two at a cost of thirty cents. Today he would pay eighty or eighty-five cents for it. That housewife who once bought a chicken for from eighty cents to a dollar, now pays from $3 to $3.50, if she gets one. Milk has risen from nine cents a quart to twenty-three cents. Sugar has gone from nine cents to nineteen cents, and we are limited to one pound per person per month."

It is worth mentioning that butter and sugar are not served at hotels and restaurants. A hotel guest may go to police headquarters if he likes and obtain sugar cards that will permit him to buy sugar, but he cannot have other things. If he wants a sweetener, he must buy a bottle of liquid saccharine with a quill in the cork, through which quill he may inject some of the colorless fluid into his cup of coffee. He probably will not like the taste of the saccharine, but he should remember that it was a terrible war, and that the aftermath is still to be endured.

To resume with Prof. Dolléans' account:

"Anthracite coal cost us about $8.40 per ton before the war; now it sells at $12 a ton. Once paid for it, we pay for my shoes. Once I have on, which are no better, cost me $22."

Cost Less in New York.

At the risk of seeming to have a too appraising eye, let me say that shoes of equal quality may be bought in New York City today for about $12. I have seen displayed in the windows of stores here, shoes marked at forty-two francs (about $3.40) that are hardly equal to shoes obtainable in America before the war at $3.

"How about wages and rents?" I asked.

"Ordinary workmen are now paid about $2.50 for ten hours' work," Prof. Dolléans replied. "Before the war they received about $2.40 per day. Women workers average $2.50 for ten hours, as compared with $1.40 before the war."

"As for rents, I will give you a typical case. A small family of my acquaintance has an apartment comprising four rooms and bath that cost $600 per year before the war. Now the rent is $920 per year."

"A family of four that lived comfortably on a table allowance of $100 per month before the war, now must find $300 per month to get along at all, with less to eat, and with fewer guests."

H. C. of L. Hits Everybody.

Do not these figures make plainly evident the fact that the home folk of France are having something of a struggle? How many luxuries do you suppose the $3.50 workman is able to afford, with butter selling at $2 a pound, and eggs at $1.30 a dozen? I am inclined to think that Americans will not be too hard in judging a people who bear such conditions uncomplainingly. Neither will they fail to see why it is that the doughboys have to pay stiff prices for some of the things they buy.

Let me give passing attention to the charge that Parisians are heartily disgusted with bawling, too, drunken and noisy officers. I heard of the incident mentioned early in this story, but believe that it is a mistake to lay too much stress upon it. The case was exceptional, but the incident itself is not at all typical. American officers are gentlemen, in the vast majority of cases, and their bearing and conduct are as good as well as on the field of battle, are such as to reflect credit on their country. The occasional rowdy cannot mar the record of the great, fine majority.

The people of France, patient and almost unbelievably courageous, in times of calamity, are today as unflinching and cheerful as of old. Americans seem very much at home among them, even though our soldiers are longing for the day when they will return to the land of apples, peaches and other good things. No doubt the French people will be glad when they can have their own country to themselves again, but would you some.

Probably there are some over-thrifts who crave overmuch the doughboy's money, but thoughtful soldiers have no doubt that for every grasping sharpshooter there is another near some camp or cantonment in America. This is the truth. It would be shameful to allow any feeling of coolness or superiority to come between such worthy comrades in arms as the French, the Americans, and the British. Certainly the sensible people in America will never be party to anything of the sort.

The French people, and the British as well, have no disinterested friendship with us. They are not for us, for that matter, and everyone must now be familiar with the insidious efforts that are being made by the German people to ingratiate themselves with our men in this country, at the expense of good feeling and kindly relationships between those who suffered in our cause. This is certainly not a time for superficial judgments.

In his next article Mr. McNaught will deal with charges against the Y. M. C. A., which he has investigated, with some care.

JANESVILLE HIGH TRIMS BRODHEAD

Janesville high school basketball team ran away from Brodhead last evening and emerged victors by a score of 23 to 9. The Brodhead team was outplayed and at no time did they threaten to overcome the Janesville lead.

Coach Crabtree opened the first half by putting in McDermott at right forward in place of Sprackling and Decker at guard in place of Powers. The blue five seemed to get away to a bad start and only made three ringers and a free throw in the center of the first half, while the reds dropped in two long ones from the Amusements? Say! There never was a Social Function yet invented that could Class Up with an Afternoon along the Edge of the Woods with your Gun or Camera, or a Wading Expedition through the Sparkling Stream after the Speckled Beauties! And, if you must plant yourself in a Plush Seat, it's a pretty Tiny Burg that can't offer you the Movies, at least Once a Week.

But there's More than That to the Hick Region. The Growing Things that you Keep your Lamps on from the time they Sprout until they're Toted to the Big Barn—the Stars, that you can't see in the Tumultuous Towns because of the Incandescents, Boosting Booze or Cigarettes—keep, you Hap to the Fact that SOMEBODY is running this Planet we live on. And that, after all, maybe it's a Good Play to Consider the Matter Occasionally and not Worry so Much about who's going to be the next Deputy Sheriff or how Steel Common stands in the Market.

Of course, we can't All have the Privilege of being Hicks. But Everybody can Give it a Try for a Day or So, anyhow. The next time you are able to Get Away from the Job, Beat It as far as you can into the Sumac. Stay there as long as you Can. Look around, and Crank up the Mental Motor you've got Under the Hood. See if you don't Come Back with a little Different Outlook.

And the Eats! Oh, Boy! The Trout that you Hook yourself, back in the Little Brook on the Hill, is a Different Beast from the one that you get Nicked a Buck and a Half for, in the Glided Cafe. LITTLE TALKS ON TREES

Copyright 1919, by The International Syndicate.

THE WHITE ASH.

THE refrigerator in your kitchen is probably made of white ash; also the handle of your broom, your garden rake, and your garden hoe. The baseball bat with which you saw "Sluggers" Jones knock that home run most likely was white ash. When you got on a street car today you noticed that white ash entered into its construction of seats and window frames, and the mandolin and piano on which you play are partly made of this same wood.

The spear with which the Greek hero, Achilles, fought had a shaft of ash. The Indians used ash for bows, paddles and canoes. In North America there are sixteen kinds of ash trees, of which the white ash is the most beautiful and the most useful. Ash is used wherever superior strength and elasticity combined with lightness in weight are desired.

The white ash is native to a wide territory in the United States, covering the entire eastern part except Florida and west as far as Minnesota. The tree gets its name from the silvery color on the lower surface of the leaves. Instead of one large leafblade, each leaf consists of five to nine leaflets, one at the end of the stem and the others arranged in pairs. The leaflets are broadly willow-shaped, dark green above, light green and often hairy on the lower surface. By midsummer the down has worn from them and they are perfectly smooth. The flowers appear in May before the leaves. The pollen-producing flowers are in dense, reddish-purple clusters, which turn yellowish when the pollen is shedding. The seed-producing flowers are borne in open clusters on separate trees and are small, vase-shaped and purplish. The fruit ripens in the fall and hangs on the tree in clusters far into the winter.

Any questions on trees will be answered by the American Forestry Association of Washington. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for answer.

Madison's floor with McDermott who successfully worked the ball down the floor and threw in one from the side. Up to the last minute of play in the first period the tally stood 5 to 3, but just as the whistle blew the locals scored, ending the half.

The second period Captain Sprackling replaced McDermott at forward and Power went in at Decker's place. Road did most of the scoring in the half and made five of the baskets, besides playing a good all around game. Sprackling made two field goals and Fisher one. The work of Fisher was especially good, while Powers was the same old star.

The game was the roughest played this year, but only four fouls were called by the referee, Brodhead's coach.

The Janesville team left for Freeport this afternoon, where they will play the Illinois team this evening. Janesville's lineup and score follows:

Baskets made by Road, seven; McDermott, one; Sprackling, two; Fisher, one; Free Throws, Road, one.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

Word from the United States Amusement company, Chicago, says that the orders for new tents of all kinds from the managers and the big top down to the horse tents and side shows are larger than they have been for some years. Although there will be only two or three of the extra large ones, like the Ringling, the Barnum and Bailey combined, and the Hagenbeck & Wallace, yet we count there will be more of the smaller shows on the road this spring than ever before.

Richard T. Ringling, New York, son of Alfred Ringling of the Barnum show, is getting together what might be called a "round up" of all the famous cowboys of the world. His idea is to give exhibitions with different companies of these famous riders and rope throwers from all over the United States and later in the season gather them all together and give a big "round up" meeting in Madison Square garden, New York. In the final round up, only the top notchers in the business world will be allowed to compete.

I have told you of the opening of the Forepaugh show in New York. Philadelphia, Washington and even more, and the big business and the smooth way in which the show ran, and the reception it received from the public, but we must not get the idea that it was all sunshine in the circus business from start to finish, for when a show the size of the Forepaugh show starts from California to Maine and back again, you are bound to see some dark days and rough places on the road.

One of these dark days came to us in Johnston, Pa., in 1887. The Forepaugh show had exhibited there on Saturday and all the morning of Sunday working in the big ambling works were on a strike, and many of them were drinking heavily. The Forepaugh show was finally cut down by a mob that night, and the city was in the hands of a mob, and the chief of police and the mayor were at the station Sunday morning when our train pulled in, and immediately sent for Mr. Forepaugh and told him that the town was in the hands of a mob, that the police were unable to cope with them, and for him not to unload his show, as they would not give him protection on the road.

If Adam Forepaugh was anything, he was fearless, and finally said to the mayor and chief, "If you will call my license off and give me permission, I will show here tomorrow afternoon and night and guarantee that I will protect myself or stand the loss."

This seemed to please the chief and mayor, and in a few minutes the show was unloading and pulling onto the lot. A few of the strikers gathered at the show grounds and got busy, insulting ladies in different ways, but no attention was paid to them. The stakes were driven for the big top, the canvas set up and everything was in readiness to raise the canvas, when there were something like 75 or more strikers on the canvas. Dan Taylor, boss canvasser, asked them to get out so the canvas could be raised, but they told him where he could go and said they would walk off when they got ready. There were between 400 and 500 men with the show and some five since.

The Carl Hagenbeck referred to as being with the show may be a son or a nephew of the original Carl, but the men with the show are all his sons.

Farm Accounts and the Farm Calendar

The government income report is a mighty hard and inconvenient thing to make out unless you have at hand the data recording your purchases and expenditures during the twelve months past.

The Janesville Daily Gazette has for distribution, a calendar produced especially for farm accounts which is the simplest accounting system yet devised. An opportunity is given to enter under the date of the month you buy or sell or pay out or receive money directly on the calendar pad, which totaled at the end of the month gives an exact record of all transactions. Anyone can make these entries and the records are then preserved there to the end of the year.

If you have made out an income report to the government without some form of income record, you will remember how difficult it was to answer the questions intelligently. This calendar is unique and complete, is easily handled and is designed especially for farm use. It will save more time and trouble than you ever dreamed of. There is no confusion or guess work and it helps you at a time when you most need it. This calendar is sent to anyone on receipt of 10c or is free with a year's subscription to the Daily Gazette.

Home of Character---No. 254

The half timber treatment has been effectively combined with the half shingle type in this design. The roof lines are decidedly individual, yet pleasing. A comfortable porch adds to the homely yet dignified lines of this house.

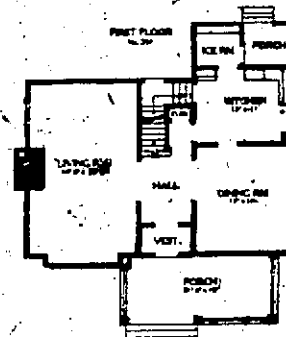

There is abundant space in the living room with its fireplace and bay. A semi-open staircase occupies one end of the center hall, while the vestibule closes the opposite end. Four good-sized bedrooms, each with a good closet, a sleeping porch and bath make up second floor.

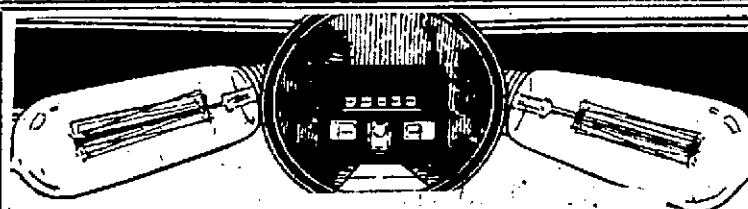

Full brick basement, hot water heat, and a good grade of finish throughout.

The cost of this home will be gladly furnished to anyone by the contractors on this page.

The sketches shown in this space may prove helpful to you in planning the home.
